This workshop is directed towards everyone who works with today's parents, regardless of where they are along the road of parenthood. It will consist of both didactic and hands on information presented in a lively manner, which is sure to hold the participant's attention. The presenter will draw on more than 35 years of experience in working with families and the teachings of Erickson, Glenn, Glasser, Satir, and numerous early childhood professionals. Today's parents, regardless of their age, face many challenges that our parents did not. This training will offer practical suggestions for the attendees to reach and engage these parents toward forming a working partnership, which will ultimately benefit both the child and parent. Adequate time for questions and answers will be allocated.

More information about the conference and registration materials will be available after February 1st.
